

Students are entitled to free textbooks and other study resources.

All aspects of availability of instructional resources to students are covered by the information system EUDOXOS (in Greek ΕΥΔΟΞΟΣ - <http://eudoxus.gr> ).

Students have direct access to the system by certifying themselves through their personal access codes. Students are given one textbook or other study resource for every course they have registered in, free of charge and within the time limits set by the law.

Students select the textbooks - resources they need among a list of related textbooks / resources available on the EUDOXOS website at the beginning of each academic year.

Provision of free instructional resources stops when students suspend their studies (for as long as their studies are suspended), graduate, cease to be students for any other reason, or surpass the maximum time foreseen for this provision.